1 A JOINT RESOLUTION HONORING THE FOUNDERS OF THE TOWN OF EDENTON
2 ON THE OCCASION OF THE TOWN'S THREE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY.

3 Whereas, an act of the North Carolina Assembly adopted in 1712 called for the 4 surveying of what is now Edenton; and

5 Whereas, Charles Eden was appointed Governor of North Carolina on July 13, 6 1713, and arrived later to create the first seat of North Carolina government at Edenton where 7 the legislature began to meet in 1722; and

8 Whereas, building lots were sold and construction was begun on private and public 9 facilities as early as 1714; and

10 Whereas, Edenton prospered to such an extent that the plotted lots had to be doubled 11 in size by 1722; and

12 Whereas, the continuing growth led to the 1767 construction of the Chowan County 13 Courthouse, situated where first platted in 1712, and which now stands as the oldest 14 continuously used courthouse in the nation and is recognized as a National Historic Landmark; 15 and

16 Whereas, the "Edenton Tea Party" of October 25, 1774, became one of the first 17 instances of colonial American women acting in an overt political manner; and

18 Whereas, Edentonian Joseph Hewes signed the Declaration of Independence; and 19 Whereas, the citizens of Edenton selected Hugh Williamson to attend the 20 Constitutional Convention at Philadelphia where he signed the proposed United States 21 Constitution; and

22 Whereas, Samuel Johnston, also of Edenton and a governor of North Carolina, 23 presided over both State conventions called to ratify the United States Constitution; and

24 Whereas, James Iredell, a lawyer from Edenton, served on the first United States 25 Supreme Court; and

26 Whereas, Edenton was the home of the Badham family of African-American 27 architects, builders, and carpenters: Miles Badham I, his son Hannibal Badham, Sr., and 28 Hannibal's sons Hannibal Badham, Jr., and Miles Badham II, whose designs and constructions 29 stand to this day; and

30 Whereas, Edenton was the home of Harriet Jacobs, whose memoirs Incidents in the 31 Life of a Slave Girl, Written by Herself, self-published in 1861 under the pseudonym Linda 32 Brent, received acclaim and helped call attention to the plight of the enslaved; and

33 Whereas, during the Civil War, Edentonians created their own defensive unit by 34 melting their church and courthouse bells to make the cannons for Edenton Bell Battery, which 35 saw service in the war; and

1           Whereas, Edenton's long history as a colonial port and its more modern protection 2 of the 1886 Roanoke River Lighthouse contribute to the history of the Albemarle Sound and 3 waterways of North Carolina; and

4           Whereas, in 1918 the people of Edenton, fearful that a significant part of our State's 5 heritage was endangered, created an organization which became the "Cupola House 6 Association" to defend against the irrevocable loss of this historically important dwelling, the 7 first such act of preservation by private citizens of North Carolina and one of the first in the 8 nation; and

9           Whereas, the General Assembly of North Carolina created the Edenton Historical 10 Commission in 1961 as evidence of the unique role Edenton and Chowan County play in the
